Why the Honoree is receiving a GEM Award including dates:

Hunter's performance in all his roles with Purchasing since starting with the County have impressed his supervisors, and have proven him a very valuable and valued employee. Hunter is a great team player. He has taken on a leadership role in assisting and guiding fellow team members. He can be trusted to do exemplary work, even outside his normal wheelhouse, accurately, on time, and without complaint or question. He has been commended by the departments he works with on a regular basis for his professionalism and work ethic.

Recently, the Purchasing department has been presented with an additional specialized project (CMAR) that falls under Texas Local Government code guidelines that Purchasing has not had to deal with before. Hunter took initiative on this project without any request from management and diligently researched both the Government Code and how other governmental entities have handled similar projects. By taking the lead and doing thorough due diligence on this project, Hunter has facilitated a high profile project with County-wide significance to move forward at a pace that is much faster than a typical procurement of this complexity would take.
