A reward is defined as a thing given in recognition of one's service, effort, or achievement. When you work in law enforcement and are good at your job you are often rewarded, rewarded with more work. Earning the trust and respect of leadership, co-workers, and outside stakeholders is an honor we can all strive for, knowing that the added workload is a byproduct of great work. Sergeant Jeff Brownrigg is a leading example of one who is trusted by our organization to successfully and routinely carry out high level complex tasks, often occurring outside normal work hours or days. Sgt. Brownrigg's leadership and willingness to serve has resulted in the capture and incarceration of hundreds of dangerous wanted fugitives. Most recently, Sgt. Brownrigg led efforts to capture an individual who absconded with a child to a foreign county and on his immediate return organized a team to track down and locate a murder suspect in a separate case.

Sgt. Brownrigg strives to carry forward the vision and message of the Sheriff's Office with complete understanding of the importance of his role, while consistently going the extra mile to ensure mission success. His dedication to the citizens of Collin County make him a valuable asset to CIS and deserving of the Employee of the Month award.
